Supra iBox™

The Supra iBox uses Infrared Data Association's (IrDA) communication technology allowing agents to experience the ease of "point and beam" when accessing listing keys. Consumers are most familiar with infrared (IrDA) through their TV remote controls; however, many handheld devices today use IrDA communications as well.

If using both the Supra iBox and the Advantage Express II KeyBoxes together, a retrofit shell is necessary in order to open the older, gray box.

iBox™ Benefits

- A slimmer figure for narrow doorways and screen doors.
- A key container that holds up to three house keys (the current electronic KeyBox holds two). It's smaller on the outside, but bigger on the inside!
- An all-metal key container with a chain in the middle to eliminate jamming.
- The key container is "touch and release" which eliminates the need to "tug" on the pouch.
- Different hours for weekday showings versus Saturday or Sunday (three different access hours settings).
- Electronic notes that can be left by the listing agent for showing agents: i.e. "Alarm code is," "Carpets just cleaned," or "Take shoes off."
- An electronic flyer that can be programmed by the listing agent for the showing agent.
- Compatibility with most handheld computers on the market.
- Recording 150% more accesses than current electronic KeyBox.
- A slate blue color for a cleaner appearance.
